To install Linux, Mac,.I have read your post on my blog, and wanted to share some of my experience of being an interpreter for the deaf. You know, the signalers who communicate with each other by flashing lights, body language, wands and the like, are constantly on the move and have to be constantly alert. I noticed a difference in a game recently between our centre-forward and our goalkeeper when we were playing against a deaf team. My centre-forward was on the left wing and in one part of the pitch he didn't know what happened. His acknowledgement was eventually signalled to him by the referee who gave him his instructions verbally. The resulting missed chance was instantly pointed out in the deaf man's head by his signaller. So, it's very difficult to watch a match at a deaf person's level. Yet I have read some of the modern literature that deals with deaf football, such as David Walsh's book The Little Book of Deaf Football - so we have a bit of a history to start from. As an interpreter, I regularly work in sports venues. Football is by far the most popular for me, with most of the venues accepting my services and a few even requiring it. I'm freelance and contract at the moment but I hope to be offered a full time role soon. Thanks for the article. The information is certainly very valuable for me. Now, I will keep reading the information on this internet site. Be sure to leave keep up the great job.This subproject is one of many research subprojects utilizing the resources provided by a Center grant funded by NIH/NC
